Reasons for Removal for TPR Cases by Race/Ethnicity

Reasons for Removal for TPR Cases by Race/Ethnicity

Neglect: overwhelming leading cause

- Accounts for 74-84% of removals across Latino, Black/African American, White, and Multiracial groups
- Made up over 67% of all TPR cases

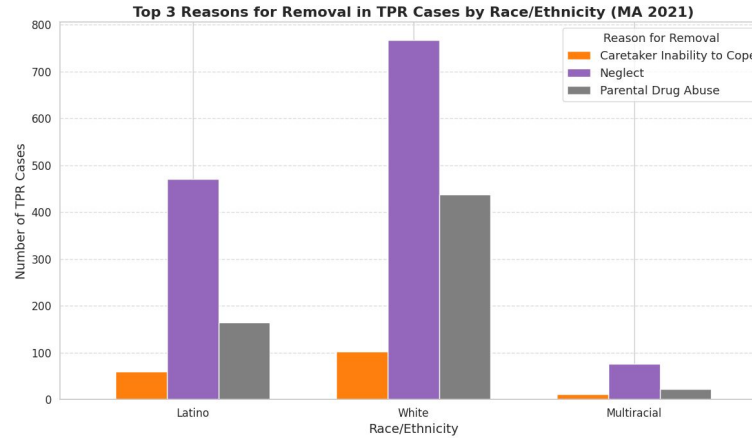

Parental Drug Abuse: distant second

- Occurred half as often as Neglect

Other reasons are relatively rare

- Parental incarceration: Never exceeded 5% of TPR cases within each race group
- Physical abuse: Typically 5-8% of TPR cases within each race group
- Caretaker inability to cope: 8.9-9.7% of TPR cases for Multiracial, White, and Latino children

Top 10 Reasons for Removal in MA TPR Cases (2000-2021)

Neglect: predominant reason for TPR removals in MA from 2000-2021. A pronounced peak in neglect cases is clear around 2005. Following a significant decline, neglect cases show an upward trend from around 2015 onwards,.

Parental Drug Abuse: sharp increase in the early 2000s, paralleling the peak observed for Neglect in 2005. After a period of decrease, a notable resurgence in cases is observable post-2015

Parental Alcohol Abuse: this reason has a comparatively lower prevalence. Minor increases were seen around 2005 and again after 2015, mirroring the temporal patterns of other substance abuse-related removals.

Other reasons: Categories such as "Physical Abuse," "Caretaker Inability to Cope," and "Abandonment" maintain lower, yet consistent, levels across the entire study period, but also demonstrate the temporal patterns of other reasons at a lower degree
